Virus Surge in Michigan Is a 'Gut Punch' to Hopes of Pandemic's End

- Infection levels in the state have exploded in recent weeks, amid an outbreak that is one of the largest and most alarming in the U.S.
- The trend points to a disconcerting phase of the pandemic: Vaccines are rolling out quickly, but upticks in cases raise the prospect of a new surge.

Ciudad Juárez, the land where the dreams of so many migrants die: "Why did they deceive us, why?"

Thousands try to cross the border almost daily and thousands succeed only to be returned to Mexico. On an international bridge, a woman collapsed crying while her children suffered at her side. Now he insists: "My fear is gone."
